A SENSIBLE MAN. The recent duels in Virginia, Louisiana and elsewhere, show no abatement of bloodymindedness on the part of those who resort to the duello to settle questions of veracity or matters of opinion. Captain Marryatt, in bis Newton Foster, gives the following argument against the practice in certain cases, which ought to have its influence upon the minds of sensible men: "For my part," says the Captain, "I never have and I never will fight a duel, if I can help it. I have a double motive for my refusal; in the first place I am afraid to offend the Deity; and in the next, I am afraid of being shot. I have therefore made up my mind pover to meet a man except upon what I consider fair terms; for when a man stakes his life, the gambling becomes serious, and an equal value should be laid down by each

If then, a man is not so big -not of equal consequence in the consideration of his fel low mites,-and married, with five small children, as I am-not having so much to lose -wby, it is clear that I risk more than he does; the stake is not equal, and I therefore shall not meet him. It on the contrary he presents a broader target -- if he is superior in rank, more patriachal at home, or has so many hundreds per annum more, why then the disadvantages will be on his side; and I trust that I am too much of a gentleman, even if he offers to waive these considerations, to permit him to fight. It would be swindling the man out of bis life."

Punch, too has just struck the sensible view of dueling in its unfairness. Count the result of a hostile meeting certain, and it is murder; count it bazard, and the stakes are unequal. Quoth Punch:

"Now, in England we have put an end to this kind of thirg. Without reference to the brutal folly and wickedness of the duel, we have put an end to it simply as rational beings who can do a sum in subtraction. We have after a good many years, we confess, of Montegue House and Wormwood Scrubs, arrived at the conclusion that dueling is unfair, because men are unequal in value.

"We now agree that an educated intellec tual, working citizen, the mainstay of a loved family, the adviser of trusting friends, a useful recognized mae, with life assurances that would be vitiated if he fell in wilful fray, is no match for an empty-headed younger son, with just brains enough for drill pale ale, and Skye terriers, who has been put into the army to be got rid of, and who may chance to find room in he narrow skull for an idea that he has been insulted. Arithmetic has settled the question, and Cocker forbids his pistol cock-

"We have got rid of the duel, because we can deduct Ensign Featherhead from Mr. Goldsworthy, and note the difference. So, if the Ensign, in an accession of martial fire, were to challenge Goldsworthy, be be the author, lawyer, doctor, merchant, or anybody else, who used to come within the degree of consarguinity, (that is, might be asked to shed blood with somebody else.) Goldsworthy would select a Policeman, as his second, and the Lord Mayor as the umpire."

USEFUL RECEIPTS.

WHEAT BREAD .- Take at night, three pints of new milk, and stir in sitted flour enough to make stiff batter, then add a halt tea-cup of yeast; cover over and let stand until morningthen add one-third teaspoonful of soda, and more new milk, according to the quantity of bread you want to make and knead up. Let it stand in the bread-tray-when light, knead and put MANUFACTURED BY POTTS & KLETT, and on greased tins; when light again, it is ready RYE BREAD .- Make the batter the same way as for wheat; manage the same way until you wish to mix it; then you want a large iron spoon to stir it with. Stir as thick as possible; have your bake tins well greased, and drop the dough upon them to rise. When light, bake it If yeast-cake is used instead of yeast, take a small one dissolved in warm water.

POTATO BREAD .- Peel five good potatoes, boil and wash them well in the water, so that you can run it all through a colander. This will make two good sized loaves. Manage the same way as with the wheat bread sponge. In the morning, add just warm water enough to warm it some; knead it up; let it rise twice, and you will have what I call beautiful bread .- Corres pondent of the Rural New Yorker.
